PRESENTATION

New Genomic Techniques (NGTs) for Crop improvement: the science, technology and social EU perspective

International Congress on the science, technology and social aspects of New Genomic Techniques (NGTs) for crop improvement

We live at a time of major opportunities and challenges for global agriculture: while New Genomic Techniques (NGTs), especially CRISPR and cisgenesis, now enable highly precise crop improvement, climate change, emerging diseases, and global market instability continue to threaten food security. This congress brings together leading experts in genome editing, trait biology, and AI-driven trait discovery to discuss advances in developing high-yielding, better-quality, more resilient, and disease-resistant crops. The latest developments in editing tools for diverse and recalcitrant crops, including trees and vegetatively propagated species, will be presented.

NGTs for Crops 2027 provides a forum for researchers, technology developers, breeders, policymakers, regulators, and industry partners to share the latest results and address the scientific, technical, social, and regulatory dimensions of NGTs. Topic-specific sessions and roundtable discussions will offer up-to-date science and perspectives on evolving global and EU regulatory frameworks and their implications for research, innovation, and food systems.

The timing of the congress is particularly significant. Held on 25–28 January 2027, just months after the adoption of the new European Union legislative framework for plants developed using New Genomic Techniques, the meeting will provide one of the first major international opportunities to discuss the practical implications of the new regulation. It will serve as a unique platform for dialogue among scientists, breeders, industry representatives, policymakers, and regulators on how the new framework can accelerate innovation, facilitate the delivery of improved crop varieties to farmers, strengthen the competitiveness of European agriculture, and contribute to more sustainable and resilient food systems.

The NGTs for Crops Congress will take place at the Palacio de Congresos de Valencia, Spain, from January 25 to January 28, 2027

CONTRACTING REGULATIONS AND CANCELLATION POLICY

CONTRACTING REGULATIONS

It is mandatory to submit the collaboration contracting form duly completed and signed for the request to be effective. Incomplete forms or those without the signature of an authorized person will not be accepted.

100% of the amount must be paid upon receipt of the corresponding invoice for the collaboration.

The dimensions and location of the stands may be modified or altered for safety or organizational reasons. Therefore, the organization reserves this right, after consultation with the parties affected.

Please note that the payment term for the collaboration is 30 days from the invoice date. For contracts made one month prior to the congress, payment must be made before the start of the event.

CANCELATION POLICY

Cancellations must be submitted in writing to sponsors@geyseco.es

The cancellation fees will be as follows:

- 50% of the total contracted amount if the cancellation is made before October 15, 2026.
- 100% of the total contracted amount if the cancellation is made after October 15, 2026.

NOTE:

The organization reserves the right to refund the amount of contracted collaborations if the event cannot take place due to force majeure causes such as weather phenomena, natural disasters, earthquakes, terrorist alerts, curfews, health emergencies, riots, epidemics/pandemics, fires, or any force majeure event or serious unforeseen circumstance beyond the control of the event organizers that could affect the safe and normal development of the event. Force majeure causes include the declaration of a state of emergency by the competent authorities, as well as any other measure that imposes a limitation or restriction on freedom of movement.

The organization will ensure the proper development of the event in its original format and date and reserves the right to modify them due to exceptional circumstances or force majeure, as referenced above. In the case of a change or conversion of the Congress format, the best way to adapt the contracted collaboration to the new format will be evaluated.
